1	05/14/2008 00:43:00	I like the informal, informational townhall meeting but we wasted the whole time on the dental issue.
2	05/14/2008 15:30:00	actual embalming and restorative techniques, grief topics, topics regarding county burials
3	05/14/2008 19:25:00	Embalming, cosmetizing, stress management
4	05/14/2008 20:47:00	Justin Zabor
5	05/14/2008 21:20:00	I enjoy the embalming seminars and restorative arts.
6	05/15/2008 13:23:00	topics have been good
		St. Paul Saints Owner, Mike Veeck, has written a great book entitled FUN IS GOOD. Two of his philosophies, "Train someone/everyone to do your job" and "No job is too 'low' for you" would be great ones for Funeral Directors to hear. I know, from experience, that Funeral Homes tend to be hierarchical, not "teams," and work tends to be delegated along a sort of demeaning pecking order, not in a team-effort kind of way.
7	05/16/2008 13:54:00	I am, by nature, horrible at delegation and a control freak. This makes me a good funeral director, but not a very good employee, colleague, or boss. This book literally revolutionized my thinking.
8	05/16/2008 14:36:00	most topics have been good but, this year not much sustenance to the presentation
9	05/16/2008 19:13:00	Featured speakers who have something to say to all in funeral service, not just to owners or large firms
10	05/19/2008 00:37:00	Someone provocative with some new insights that can inspire us in our daily work.
11	05/20/2008 18:25:00	Embalming
12	05/20/2008 19:10:00	More seminars on embalming and/or restorative arts
13	05/21/2008 19:03:00	Any speakers that provide new information, and this year did have great speakers.
14	05/21/2008 19:04:00	business management skills, marketing-both to the public and with merchandise in house
